A smart, poetic fable about not fitting in.

A colourful little caravan roams around the world. One evening it stops by a village. Soon unkind comments are flying left and right. Everything about her is a ripe subject for gossip, from her wheels to her flowery colors to her chimneyless roof. To put a stop to the merciless mockery, the little caravan tries hard to look like everybody else. But then her old caravan friends pass by... and they don't even recognize her!
