To set out in search of the unknown, whether far or near. To learn that everything between here and there is both different and yet... familiar!

To discover the world, to set out in search of the unknown, whether far or near. To learn that everything between your starting point and your destination is both different and yet... familiar! Just how long have humans been doing this? What drives us to seek out new horizons, only to return home once more, full of wonder? For since time immemorial, humans, animals, plants, and above all, ideas, have done a lot of traveling! This story full of surprises teaches us to better observe and be curious about the world around us.
