A beautifully illustrated bestiary of small citydwelling animals.

Cities are wonderful ecosystems and home to many living creatures that are incredibly helpful to nature. In collaboration with the Humanity and Biodiversity foundation (FHB), this book lists over 100 species living in the city, to help us get to know and better protect them. Among the species listed, some are familiar and others shrouded in more mystery. Each profile describes the kind of food the creature eats and its place in the food chain.
