Music soothes the savage breast.

Gaston can't sleep. The sounds of the city echo in his head: horns, sirens, jackhammers...

Determined to find some peace and quiet, he leaves his house, finds the highest hill in town, and climbs a tree there. Just when he thinks he's far from the urban din, the sky proves it can be just as noisy! Is there no quiet to be found anywhere? What if the solution lies in music and its gentle melodies?

This picture book invites readers to compose their own inner songs to slow the hectic pace of city life.
