Two endearing characters, polar opposites, act out a bittersweet contemporary fable that examines our political and social commitment.

Just how exactly did Arthur wind up a part of Sandrine's unlikely plans? What are the chances? The hypochondriac young man would seem to have nothing in common with the Brussels street artist whose aim is to open people's eyes to the "big lies" that surround them... But what if frail little Arthur is, against all expectations, the only person capable of helping Sandrine reach her goal?
