This novel's three narrators will help young readers come to an understanding of mental disability.

Yaëlle's older brother Pierrot has a disability. One morning, she offers to accompany him to school. Pierrot is thrilled: he's been dreaming for so long of going to a school for normal people. But when the other kids make fun of him, he loses it. Running away, he soon becomes lost in the city, where he meets the Lady, who lives on the streets in a cardboard box she calls a castle.
