The overwhelming testimony of a father about his daily struggle with his son.

How do we react when faced with your child's illness? How do we mourn the loss of the perfect child we had dreamed of? Faced with his son's autism, Max chooses to take on this battle. For eight years, he dives head on into teaching Olivier to have the autonomy that his illness is refusing him. Against the doctors' suggestions, little by little he has his son confront his fears. Each small victory counts and gives them the strength to continue.
