A rare and powerful story about obesity and self-perception.

Navie was sick. She was morbidly obese and suffered for it every day. And yet, she never showed it and always had a smile on her face... Self-acceptance was fundamentally important to her, but how could she love the girl in the mirror who did not reflect her suffering? Navie was carrying the weight of a second person—one she loved, tried to run away from, and would eventually have to destroy.
