A powerful story of teenage torment and first love: a cross between The Virgin Suicides and Blue Is the Warmest Color.

A gentle blonde dreamer from a happy, wealthy family and a violent, rageful brunette from a broken, dysfunctional home. At middle school, one dives body and soul into reading and writing fantasy stories, while the other lashes out with a clique that accepts her because she's not "a real girl." They have nothing in common. Except for the cliff where they secretly meet every day, and the blood oath they made there not to live a day over thirteen. This Friday, before noon, will Astrid and Charlie take the plunge, or will they choose to face their feelings and instead, close the gap between them?
