A poetic, artistic tour of urban gardens for plant and nature lovers.

As an artist, Raphaële Bernard-Bacot is a "pollinator." For two years, she roamed the greater Parisian region meeting with urban gardeners. From the former working class gardens in Garches to urban farms in Versailles, co-op gardens atop and at the foot of apartment towers, she sketched flowers, fruits, and vegetables, as well as those who took care of them.

The result: 54 pages of impressionistic sketches bursting with gardening anecdotes, complemented by short, poetic pieces that paint a tender, humorous portrait of these urban gardeners.
