"This is a spare, affecting work of quiet contemplation of a life in its barest form." Publishers Weekly

"Starting with the view through binoculars on the cover, this almost wordless book takes readers on a cinematic journey through a man's life across time and space. Each two-page spread juxtaposes on the left, the character as he ages from boy to man, and on the right, the character's view of the world. The words are few and carefully chosen: mainly dates and place names. This stunning work employs a retro-vintage printing style with just three colors, no half-tones, and minimalist compositions. A truly unique visual poem." ~ Bologna Children's Book Fair Award Jury
