After Cœur de bois, La rue qui ne se traverse pas, and La Mer et lui (Notari), then La Môme aux oiseaux and Le Cri (Rouergue), the famous duo is back.

Artist Henri Meunier and writer Régis Lejonc join the Little Urban lineup with a breathtaking graphic novel. In this powerful ode to the mountains, a rope is all that keeps two men together—and alive. A gripping tale of survival.

- "As soon as I'm strong enough, you're getting me over that mountain."

- "I don't know about that. Let me think about it."

- "That isn't a request."

- "It is to me." The shepherd drank a little goat's milk straight from the bucket, then held it out to the murderer. "Whoever you are, the mountain is more dangerous than you are."
