Teen angst... from the parents' perspective.

A novel about what it's like being in a family when emotions are running high, just like on a battlefield. This is the story of a couple pushed to their breaking point by their fifteen-year-old son's repeated offenses.

The parents have done nothing wrong. But war has broken out anyway. And they are not ready. Their son's school gives up on him, and his father spins out of control while his mother tries desperately to calm everyone down.
