Editorial cartoonist Plantu and photographer Reza bring their respective works together to reflect on major issues of the past and present.

This book is the fruit of a longstanding desire to work together. Recently, old friends Plantu and Reza have begun combining their highly individual modes of expression and perspectives on the world. The result is a hundred works that fuse Plantu's drawings with Reza's photographs. Among the themes addressed are subjects dear to both artists: women's and children's rights, the environment, power struggles, and defending the freedom of expression.
