A gorgeous book that untangles truth from myth when it comes to animals: are foxes really sly?

We admire them, abhor them, attribute character traits to them, fear them and laugh at them. Twenty animals are featured here: lions, bees, wolves, monkeys, toads, doves, foxes, ants, elephants, swans, dogs, rats, eagles, donkeys, cats, turtles, snakes, lambs, and owls. What are their reputations in our collective imagination? Where does truth end and myth begin? This splendidly illustrated book will help readers tell fact from fiction, whether they're familiar with these animals or are encountering them for the first time.

Bonus: 3 booklet inserts about 3 fantastical creatures: unicorns, basiliks, and phoenixes.

[il n'y a que 19 animaux dans la liste, en fait, parce que "le lion" y paraît 2 fois: a corriger?]
