An environmental fable to raise awareness about deforestation and fires in the Amazon. Includes an appendix of creative activities.

It's naptime deep in the Amazon rainforest, but Ama's having trouble sleeping. The forest isn't making the music it used to, which bothers her. To her surprise, she sees the animals panicking: they've got something to show her! Ama discovers a vast swath of deforestation. She offers to let the animals live and eat in people's houses, as their habitat and food sources have been destroyed. Together, can they succeed in convincing humans to stop their slaughtering them?

This book preaches love and respect for the environment, nature, and the planet.

The "Creative Picture Books" series collects beautifully illustrated tales, with suggestions for hands-on activities at the end.
