An entertaining, educational work of science and humor to raise public awareness of climate change and save the planet.

Hey, the Seas Are Rising! is, first and foremost, the story of an actual popular science show hosted by the authors. In the course of powerful, original episodes, they presented their views on climate change. The science was leavened with humor, coming to life in funny and effective drawings. This unique show gave birth to this book, an essential tool in today's world for understanding what climate change is and the impact humans have on their environment, particularly on shores and coastlines. But don't panic! You will also learn that nature offers us solutions. All we have to do is pay closer attention!
