A girl and a seed journey to the city, meeting citydwellers there who hope for a greener life.

One day, a little girl blows into the city, clinging to a dandelion seed borne on the wind. With all its concrete and asphalt, the city doesn't seem at all hospitable to plants. But the girl and her seed find flowers blooming at the feet of trees, and green rooftops. Encouraged, they decide to make the city their new home. This silent picture book conveys all the sounds, smells, and poetry of springtime! With a nonfiction appendix on weeds and urban greening.
