At ballet school, Chine, Delphine, and Stéphane love, hate, and help each other. Not everyone gets to be a dancer! Will their dreams come true?

To be a dancer, whatever the cost: this is the credo of Astrid Éliard's characters. Without this shared passion, Chine, Delphine, and Stéphane would never have met. Their backgrounds, upbringing, social class, motivations, and family histories all divide them. With great humor and tenderness, Astrid Éliard sweeps readers into a world of tutus, pink tights, ballet slippers, and dreams... These three aspiring dancers are also teenagers caught up in the questions of their day and age. They must undergo changes, live through the tumult of first love, and reconcile their ideal of perfection with the banality of real life...
