A couple teams up against an outsider: Parkinson's.

"What happens to a couple when one of them is diagnosed with an incurable disease? Who can best help: neurologists, scientists, psychologists? Or just you me, together?" Despite Catherine's diagnosis and the COVID pandemic, she and her husband decide to re-commit to the love that drew them together to begin with. Husband and wife, caregiver and patient, they describe life in sickness and in health, an upended daily routine in all its fortitude, anger, fear, kindness, tenderness. A valuable account that proves humanity survives only on hope, and hope on love.
