A middle school daughter of a blended family sensitively tackles her daily life and musings in this illustrated diary.

Soan and Chloé are siblings in a blended family, but they've always been very close – as close as a real brother and sister. That is, until Soan starts drifting away, and Chloé suffers for it in silence. So she confides her hopes and sorrows to her diary, finding in drawing a way to deal with daily life and the unfairness she perceives.
