Feelings circulate among humans; love and friendship make our hearts beat faster and make us feel better – a powerful motivating force.

Love and friendship and two positive relationships of trust. True friendship and love do us good, not harm. We don't hurt or attack others out of friendship or love. In love and friendship, we can't lie or pretend. In being friends or lovers, we each discover a part of ourselves in our partners, trusting without fear of judgment. Love and Friendship, my entry in the "Bite-Sized Philosophy" series, tackles a topic essential to children, putting words to feelings and helping them think about trust and respect from a philosophical point of view.
