Falling in love can prove irrevocable and overwhelming as changes go. But doesn't all love makes us into someone other than ourselves?

A title from our "Philosophy for Teens" series, Falling in Love surveys the emotion of love in our society. Love occupies a central place in our conversations and preoccupations, but... why? How?

A useful introduction middle and high-schoolers preparing for the baccalaureate in philosophy, Falling in Love offers a wide variety of perspectives on the topic, from major philosophers to novelists, poets, and even filmmakers. But the book is also suitable for older readers fond of pondering existential questions.
