For the first time, an exposé that takes a deep look at the reality of romantic relationships in a vast and swiftly modernizing land.

Does love even exist in China? In this eye-opening look at the singles scene where parents pick spouses, the flourishing market for matchmaking agencies, divorce, prostitution, and homosexuality, Dorian Malovic explores every aspect of contemporary Chinese relationships, sharing candid firsthand accounts from men and women, revealing lives by turns tragic, comic, or strange. Confidences from wives, daughters, mothers, sisters, matchmakers, concubines, and prostitutes of every gender turn up never-before-heard tales, opening the doors to a little-known China through its most intimate secrets.
