Discover history through the eyes of a sea creature!

"I have eight arms, seven letters in my name, two huge eyes, hundreds of suckers and... one friend." Thus begins the account of Aglae, a strange little creature who meets a man named Charles Darwin in 1832. They discover each other and get to know each other. Together they will revolutionise science. A poetic book that explores the primary meaning of the word "ecology": the study of interactions between living beings.
