A sensitive graphic novel with a kind and informative message about everyday sexism, based on advanced sociological research.

Trained as a sociologist, Marine Spaak spent a few years analyzing her own status as a 21st-century woman and the obstacles she encountered every day, the better to figure out how to assert herself as a free, independent woman. Filled with deep sociological insight, this funny yet clever graphic novel encourages reflection on women's liberation.

Young French cartoonist Marine Spaak studied human and social sciences. A few years ago, she launched a comics blog where humorously records events from her daily life.
