Immersive investigative reporting over a two-year span from a rising star of French narrative non-fiction.

For a few years now, the topic of violence against women has been all over the news. Over 150,000 women press charges every year. #MeToo, murders: the debate centers around victims whose voices are finally making themselves heard. But what about violent men? Why do they resort to violence? Despite punishment, they're often repeat offenders. Can they ever change? Journalist Mathieu Palain, host of the hit podcast " Violent Men," embedded himself in support group, then pursued his investigation with new firsthand accounts about men who lash out against the ones they claim to love.
