How to throw a Christmas party like no one's ever seen before!

Billy, the little monkey, longs to throw a Christmas party in the jungle for his friend the sloth, who seems to be lost in endless slumber. But how? "Let's improvise!" cries the toucan. One creature brings a Christmas tree (a palm tree, but still pretty), another brings lights (glow worms), and wrapping paper (the armadillo's many socks)! Anything is possible, as long as everyone works together! Red patches of seasonal merriment begin blooming in the jungle's green, and then white for snow. And the starry sky in the book's final image is as beautiful as snowflakes floating down on all the animals as they gather round the sloth, now fully awake.
