How do we lend our working lives meaning?

In 2012, management students Matthieu Dardaillon and Jonas Guyot carried out several missions for social entrepreneurs as part of a project they called "Destination Changemakers." After graduating, they took the plunge. Matthieu launched Ticket for Change, fostering a new generation of social entrepreneurs, while Jonas started Corporate for Change, developing socially committed projects. Here these two take stock of the lessons of experience, in particular addressing students and recent graduates who might be wondering about their potential for impact. They're not saying they have all the answers, but the inspiring profiles and keys to action that Matthieu and Jonas have to share are a start.
