"A fiercely poignant novel about love's power and an ordinary man's determination. Simple, beautiful writing, pathos-free despite its shattering subject matter."

This trip is a special one. Simon is returning to Mauthausen. He's kept his silence for 65 years. Over the course of three days, he and his wife will make their way back, their days brightened by small gestures and kindnesses, love. And while glimmers of humanity might sparkle in his memory, beneath the coat of unbroken snow lies unspeakable pain.
