What if Nature came back into its own once and for all?

The Ancients say the day the Ekomers came to earth was the greatest cataclysm in history. Terraformed, our planet's fauna and flora changed forever. Each plant answered the invaders' call and joined forces against human survivors who took refuge beneath a protective dome in a crater in deepest Africa in order to survive.

Thiziri the albino, known as "The White One," is the best Reaper. Her role: to keep her own fed by hunting. But their prey is dwindling.

Driven ever farther from the safety of the dome, she cannot help but question the Ancients when she finds an ocean that geographically should be hundreds of miles away.

And what to make of the red moon that appears one night? In the end, who is the predator and who the prey?
