In this Finnish epic, a young London partygoer leaves her comfort zone and finds her way forward.

Mary's future seems all laid out. She's just turned thirty and will take over her father's position as CEO of the family business. When she finds out she's just inherited a cottage in Finland, she sees a chance to give herself a magical vacation. But little does she suspect that one final trial awaits her there. The cottage has been reduced to a mere hut inhabited by a domesticated reindeer and parrot, with an abandoned shop right beside it. Her father cuts her off and gives her an ultimatum: prove that she is worthy to be his successor by rebuilding her great-aunt's shop on her own.
