A YA graphic novel with a funny, quirky voice written for anyone who has struggled (or will struggle!) to discover their true identity.

Élise grew up in a lively family: she is surrounded by four outgoing sisters, a mother who never stops talking, and a father driven by his passion for the cello. Élise, however, is introverted and modest. She grows up with the feeling that she's the black sheep of the family.

This graphic novel follows Élise through her final year in high school, a pivotal year, as she reflects deeply on her future. The heroine slaloms through this period with an unquenchable desire to discover who she really is.
