A liberating road trip for three teens roughed up by life. A steady build shot through with humor and feeling that keeps readers on the edge of their seat.

When we don't love anyone else or feel loved ourselves, a emptiness opens up inside that sometimes needs urgent filling. Charlotte is fleeing a toxic mother, Thomas escaping too painful a grief, and Matthieu rejecting a broken home. They don't know each other, but wind up on the road together for a few days. Enough time to share, fight, make up, have fun, grow up, and choose. To live. To love. To move forward. A magnificent ode to love and friendship.
