Two books in one, tête-bêche, that invite us to reflect from two different points of view on our relationship with where we live, accepting others, and solidarity.

Two books, two intertwined stories printed back-to-back:

1. Paper Houses: a child draws houses open to the sun, the winds, and all people, but the eraser does its work... and readers tumble back into everyday reality

2. Night Bird: there's someone new in the neighborhood, a curious sort who lives and sleeps in his car. The township's welcome has been cold indeed, and becomes even more so when he decides to draw his life on the empty walls of houses.
