A sensitive and funny novel about illness, denial, acceptance, and love, with plenty of jokes!

Pauline and her grandma have a sweet and loving relationship. But recently, her grandma has started saying funny things and no one's laughing... Her parents and the doctors say she's got some sort of illness. That's why she keeps mixing up words and forgetting things, and that's why it's not funny. But Pauline knows the truth: her grandma is joking, and her parents just don't have a sense of humor!
