They are survivors. They were looking for peace. They found hell.

Farrah, Kate, Tanya, and Cheryl are survivors. They've each escaped sadistic murderers and are struggling to get back on their feet. Confronted with the limitations of law enforcement and abandoned by the justice system, they've created their own support group with one goal in mind: revenge. Although they initially came together to exorcise their tragedies, the four young women soon find themselves combining their skills to eliminate their tormentors one by one.

But can a victim really find peace by behaving like a predator? At what cost?
