"Violin and xylophone celebrate in this audiobook full of little bugs!" ~

Cricket plays the xylophone, and his friend Stradi the butterfly, the violin. At the Grand Insect Orchestra competition, the two musicians hadn't even started playing when the door was slammed in their faces. String instruments are reserved for jumping insects and percussion instruments for insects that crawl or walk. But these two friends aren't about to give up. They dress up in disguise and audition again. Their gamble pays off: they're accepted! But on the night of the concert, their disguises crack open and reveal their true natures. Are they kicked out? No... they receive thunderous applause!
