The first volume of this dystopian trilogy raises questions about our humanity through the lenses of technology, environmental concerns, and class differences.

In a submerged world where continents have turned into archipelagoes, 17-year-old Bunny is looking for her abducted father and sister. Her path crosses that of Adam Belfleur, a moneyed heir and genius designer fond of losing himself completely in a virtual life only the wealthiest can afford: The Lace. Despite coming from completely opposite worlds, they embark together on an exciting mutual quest against the dangers of digital society.
