This sweet, gentle novel tinged with great humor tackles such complicated subjects as unemployment, living on the margins, identity, and a sense of self-worth.

A little girl living in an apartment filled to bursting with bags of dry dog food.

A young man lost in life, heartbroken over his friend's silence.

An old unhoused man obsessively clipping magazines to reconstitute a woman's face.

What if the whimsy and innocence of one of these characters were to transform the lives of the two others? A small group of wounded people gather in this novel tinged with humor and brimming with life.
