Born in 1908, Henri Cartier-Bresson is the master of reportage photography, and the father of photojournalism.

Following the tragic fates of the Spanish Republicans, documenting the liberation of Paris, capturing Gandhi's weariness just hours before his assassination, or witnessing the victory of the Chinese Communist Party: Henri Cartier-Bresson's story is that of a tireless wanderer of the world. A keen observer of the major events of the 20th century, he settled in Paris, whose streets he continuously rediscovered.
