A little girl tells about her grandfather's Alzheimer's in this sensitive and poetic picture book about love and memory.

Elsewhere is a moving story that sensitively tackles the topic of Alzheimer's disease through the eyes of a young girl. She describes her grandfather, once a man full of life but now overtaken by memory loss. Simple words and poignant poetry are brought to life by illustrations that subtly transform over the course of the story in a visual depiction of the disease's progression. The use of linocut printmaking lends the pictures a raw, expressive concreteness at once fragile, vibrant, and deeply human.
