Everything you ever wanted to know about endocrine disruptors (that no one else would tell you).

Cosmetics, household products, medications, kitchen utensils, foods, pesticides, water, the very we breathe: endocrine disruptors are everywhere, causing our bodies to malfunction. Their harmful effects are all the more worrisome for having now been observed over several generations. Meanwhile, diseases linked to these substances, including cancer, are making alarming headway. Drawing on a wealth of scientific research, Corinne Lalo explains the phenomenon of chemical poisoning at a cellular level and gives tips for protecting ourselves from it.
